The problem with college is that it is hard to manage your time between class, work, and the things that make you happy, all while still getting a good night sleep. “College: the game” is a chance for you to take control of your own life and set a successful balance. It’s a chance to test what strategies allow for the best balance between happiness, grades, and wealth.

The solution is to have balance in your life. Don’t put all your time into one of the three categories and you will be all right. From there you can plan your own actual life accordingly.

Goal:
Go through a 15 week simulation of the semester by entering different numeric values in various categories.

Results:
Your happiness, wealth, and grades per week and after the last week, your overall happiness, wealth, and grades values according to your choices.

Special features include:
- Importation of pictures to explain how happy you are, how good (or bad) your grades are, and how much wealth you have obtained
- User-friendly calculator to be sure you don’t go over the 168 hours given in a standard week

Benefits include:
- A chance to see what will happen if you don’t study or study too much
- A chance to see how happy you would be if you took a new job
- A chance to see how unhappy you’d really be if you didn’t pass your class
- A chance to see how much you can really learn in class if you aren’t actively engaged
- A chance to see how much sleep you’ll lose if you go out to a party
- And much much more!
